1) Each moderator has a chance of 5 minutes presentation to introduce each group (what will be discussed, who should attend, how the group is organized, and what outcome is expected, etc.)

2) All participants decide which group they join.

3) Assistants (The University of Tokyo students assigned for each group) hold a paper that each group number is written, and participants go to the group.

4) All groups will go to designated room with help of assistants (After Group lunch).

5) Start discussion (the way of organizing the discussion depends on the moderator.)

6) Come back to the exhibition hall in the afternoon break, and then go back to Koshiba Hall (main conference hall).

7) Final presentations are made by all groups in front of all participants on the final day of the meeting.
